Reports that's the time it will spend during its final approach to the planet The InSight lander is being targeted at a flat plain just north of the planet's equator called Elysium Planitia.. It carries a suite of instruments – many of them from Europe – to try to determine the rocky world's internal structure [] As with previous surface missions, InSight must survive the “seven minutes of terror” – the time it takes for a probe entering Mars' thin atmosphere at hypersonic speed to slow to walking pace and gently put itself on the ground.. Then, it will fire its retro rockets to slowly descend to the surface of Mars, and land on the smooth plains of Elysium Planitia. Josh Ritter So Runs The World Away Rar
